This particular story arc also featured the DC Bombshells, which presented a vastly different version of Harley than what readers were used to. ## Superbaby and Baby Lois

Superbaby and Baby Lois

Superman and Lois Lane's relationship is one of the most iconic and beloved in comics history, but there was one storyline that left readers scratching their heads. In "Superman's Girl Friend Lois Lane #42," titled "The Romance of Superbaby and Baby Lois," the couple was shown getting married as babies. The comic explained that a youth serum caused Lois and Clark to turn into babies, but it also revealed that Lois was tricking Superman into marriage. This added an unsettling twist to the already bizarre storyline, as it depicted the couple as children instead of adults and made the ceremony seem more creepy than cute. This storyline will forever be remembered as a strange and bizarre moment in the history of Superman and Lois Lane's love story.

Green Lantern and Star Sapphire's Cosmic Romance

*10 Most Bizarre DC Comics Love Affairs - Green Lantern and Star Sapphire's Cosmic Romance

Green Lantern and Star Sapphire's cosmic romance is one of the most bizarre love affairs in the DC Comics universe. She has had a long-standing obsession with Green Lantern, going to great lengths to win his affections. Despite her aggressive and sometimes violent behavior, Green Lantern is drawn to her and the two have had a tumultuous relationship throughout the comics.

Their romance reaches its climax when Star Sapphire chooses to become a mortal to be with Green Lantern, but the story ends up being tragic. Their love is not meant to be and they end up parting ways. However, they both still hold a strong connection to each other. The cosmic and powerful nature of their love makes it one of the most bizarre love affairs in DC comics.

The Flash and Iris West's time-traveling love story

The Flash and Iris West's time-traveling love story

Iris West is a reporter and the long-time love interest of the Flash, Barry Allen. Their relationship is complicated by the fact that Barry Allen is able to time-travel, often leading to unexpected and confusing situations.

In one instance, Barry goes back in time and accidentally marries his own granddaughter from the future, which leads to a love triangle between the three. In another instance, Barry's time-traveling causes Iris to be erased from history, leading to a desperate search for a way to restore her.

The Flash's ability to travel through time also brings up the issue of the "butterfly effect" where any small change in the past could have a significant impact on the present, including the fate of his relationship with Iris. Their love story is often filled with unexpected twists and turns, making it one of the most bizarre love affairs in the DC Comics universe.

Batman and Poison Ivy's toxic relationship

*10 Most Bizarre DC Comics Love Affairs - Batman and Poison Ivy's toxic relationship

Poison Ivy, also known as Pamela Isley, is a villainess with the power to control plants and the ability to manipulate men with her pheromones. Batman, on the other hand, is a vigilante and a symbol of justice. The two have had a long-standing, complicated relationship that is often described as “toxic.”

Throughout the comics, Poison Ivy has used her powers to manipulate Batman and make him fall under her spell, despite his reluctance. Despite her villainous actions, Batman is often drawn to her, and their relationship is a constant back and forth of Batman trying to stop her and Poison Ivy trying to win him over.

Their relationship is further complicated by the fact that Poison Ivy is a villain and Batman is a hero, making it impossible for them to be together. They often find themselves on opposite sides of the law, with Batman trying to stop her from committing crimes and Poison

Ivy trying to convince him to join her cause.

This toxic relationship, full of manipulation and conflicting interests, makes it one of the most bizarre love affairs in the DC Comics universe. It also highlights the complexity of Batman's character, as he is often torn between his duty as a hero and his attraction to Poison Ivy.

Wonder Woman And Aquaman

Wonder Woman And Aquaman

As fans eagerly anticipate the release of Aquaman 2, many may want to revisit some of the character's past romantic storylines in the comics. While Aquaman is typically faithful to his wife Mera, the Flashpoint universe presented a different scenario in which he was paired with Wonder Woman. This led to a war between the Atlanteans and the Amazons, with Wonder Woman taking on a much more villainous role.

While the idea of Aquaman and Wonder Woman joining their kingdoms through marriage wasn't that strange, things took a bizarre turn when Wonder Woman killed Mera and then mocked her death. This was an unusual and unexpected development, as Wonder Woman is typically known for trying to solve conflicts diplomatically with her lovers. It was also strange as it was clear that Wonder Woman still loved Aquaman, making it hard to understand why she would start a war over a man, which is not in line with her character's lore from previous universes.

This led to her descent into madness, as she began to manipulate and harm those around her in an attempt to become a superhero herself.

Things came to a head when Jean, in her delusional state, murdered Sue Dibny, the wife of the Elongated Man, in an attempt to frame Ray for the crime. This led to the couple's divorce and Jean's eventual institutionalization. The storyline was not only disturbing but also tragic as Jean's descent into madness was not only caused by Ray's actions but also her desire to be seen as a hero like her husband. It was a reminder that sometimes love and desire for validation can lead to destructive consequences.

Batman And Black Canary

Batman And Black Canary

The relationship between Batman and Black Canary, also known as Dinah Lance, was one of the most bizarre and unexpected love affairs in DC Comics history. Although they had a strong working relationship as members of the Justice League, their romantic connection was never hinted at until later comics.

It was revealed that Batman had been secretly in love with Black Canary for years, and even went as far as to create a special suit for her to use in battle. However, Black Canary was not aware of these feelings and had a long-standing romantic relationship with Green Arrow. This led to a love triangle between the three heroes, with Batman's unrequited love for Black Canary causing tension and conflict within the Justice League.

The storyline was not only strange, but also uncomfortable as it was clear that Batman's feelings for Black Canary were not reciprocated. It also created a sense of betrayal between Batman, Black Canary, and Green Arrow. The story arc ultimately led to the break-up of Black Canary and Green Arrow's relationship and Batman realizing that his feelings were not going to be returned.
