

James Gunn, the renowned filmmaker, has indeed confirmed that The Flash will serve as a transformative force, resetting the continuity of the DC Extended Universe (DCEU).

Collaborating with Aquaman and the Lost Kingdom, The Flash sets the stage for a highly anticipated cinematic experience: Superman: Legacy, marking the inaugural film of the new DC Universe (DCU) slated for 2025. However, as the multiverse expands and new iterations of iconic characters emerge, the question arises: Who will be the next actor to embody the lightning-powered hero? Today we have made a list of 5 Actors Perfectly Suited to Be the Next Flash in DC Movies.

5 Actors Perfectly Suited to Be the Next Flash In DC Movies

1. Dylan O'Brien
2. Timothée Chalamet
3. Taron Egerton
4. Asa Butterfield
5. Ross Lynch

Dylan O'Brien

*5 Actors Perfectly Suited to Be the Next Flash In DC Movies - Dylan O'Brien

Dylan O'Brien is an American actor who rose to fame for his role as Stiles Stilinski in the popular television series "Teen Wolf." Born on August 26, 1991, in New York City, O'Brien began his career in the entertainment industry by creating videos and posting them on his YouTube channel. He gained a significant following and eventually transitioned into acting.

When it comes to why Dylan O'Brien would be a perfect candidate to play the role of The Flash in the DC Universe, several factors come into play. Firstly, O'Brien has proven his talent in portraying complex and relatable characters, which is essential for capturing the essence of a beloved superhero like The Flash. He has a natural ability to infuse humor and vulnerability into his performances, traits that are integral to the character's portrayal.

O'Brien has also demonstrated his physicality and agility in action-oriented roles, making him a suitable choice for the fast-paced and dynamic nature of The Flash. His past experiences in films like "The Maze Runner" trilogy have showcased his ability to handle intense and physically demanding sequences, which aligns with the superhero's abilities.

Timothée Chalamet

*5 Actors Perfectly Suited to Be the Next Flash In DC Movies - Timothée Chalamet

Timothée Chalamet is a talented and highly regarded actor known for his impressive performances and natural charisma. Born on December 27, 1995, in New York City, Chalamet began his acting career in the mid-2000s, but it was his breakthrough role in the critically acclaimed film "Call Me by Your Name" in 2017 that brought him widespread recognition and acclaim.

Now, turning to the idea of Chalamet as a potential candidate to portray The Flash in the DC Universe, it's important to consider the qualities that make him a compelling choice. The Flash, a character known for his quick wit, youthful energy, and internal conflicts, would require an actor who can bring both emotional depth and a sense of levity to the role.

Chalamet's ability to convey vulnerability and charm, as seen in his previous performances, would lend itself well to the portrayal of Barry Allen.

Taron Egerton

*5 Actors Perfectly Suited to Be the Next Flash In DC Movies - Taron Egerton

Egerton first gained recognition for his breakout role as Gary "Eggsy" Unwin in the action-comedy film "Kingsman: The Secret Service" (2014), directed by Matthew Vaughn. His portrayal of a street-smart young man turned spy showcased his ability to bring a blend of charm, wit, and physicality to the screen. The film's success led to a sequel, "Kingsman: The Golden Circle" (2017), further solidifying Egerton's status as a rising star. Born on November 10, 1989, in Birkenhead, Merseyside, England, Egerton has risen to prominence through a series of impressive roles in both film and television.

Egerton has showcased his action chops in films like the "Kingsman" series, where he performed intense and physically demanding stunts. This experience would be advantageous for portraying The Flash's superhuman agility and reflexes, allowing him to convincingly bring the character's super speed to life on the big screen.

Asa Butterfield

*5 Actors Perfectly Suited to Be the Next Flash In DC Movies - Asa Butterfield

Butterfield's breakthrough role came in 2008 when he starred as Bruno in the critically acclaimed film "The Boy in the Striped Pyjamas." His portrayal of a young boy growing up during the Holocaust earned him widespread praise and showcased his ability to deliver nuanced performances even at a young age. Following this success, Butterfield continued to take on challenging roles that allowed him to showcase his range and versatility.

Butterfield's youthful appearance and ability to convincingly portray characters of various ages make him a suitable choice for the Flash, who is often depicted as a young superhero.

His natural charisma and on-screen presence would bring the necessary energy and likability to the character, making him relatable to audiences.

Ross Lynch

*5 Actors Perfectly Suited to Be the Next Flash In DC Movies - Ross Lynch

Ross Lynch was born on December 29, 1995, in Littleton, Colorado, and began his career as a child actor, showcasing his abilities in both acting and music at an early age. Lynch rose to prominence through his roles in various Disney Channel productions, including the lead role in the hit series “Austin & Ally.”

Lynch has a strong musical background, which could contribute to his portrayal of the Flash. The Flash is often depicted as a character with a quick wit and a playful personality, and Lynch’s experience as a singer and musician could bring a unique energy and rhythm to the role. He has shown a talent for performing on stage and has a knack for engaging with audiences, qualities that could translate well to the high-energy, quick-thinking superhero.

Also Read: Kraven the Hunter: All You Need to Know About the Upcoming Movie and Its Lead Actor “Aaron Taylor-Johnson”