

Krysten Ritter's fresh appearance sparks speculation about a Jessica Jones comeback | 1

Krysten Ritter's recent activities on social media have fans buzzing about the possibility of her returning to the Marvel Cinematic Universe (MCU) as Jessica Jones. Ritter has been sharing images and videos that subtly hint at her character, including wearing a t-shirt featuring the Daredevil logo and another that Jessica Jones wore in the Netflix series. These teases have led to speculation that she might appear in the upcoming Disney+ series Daredevil: Born Again, which is currently filming in New York City.

The speculation isn't just based on her wardrobe choices. Ritter's interactions and the timing of her posts align with the production schedules of MCU projects, further fueling rumors. Despite this, there hasn't been an official confirmation from Marvel Studios, and all signs still point to these being hopeful speculations from fans and media.

Adding to the excitement, the MCU has been incorporating characters from Netflix's Marvel shows, like Daredevil and Kingpin, who have already appeared in other MCU projects. This integration has opened the door for characters like Jessica Jones to return, potentially alongside other beloved characters from the Netflix series.
