Olivia Bender is an interior designer who creates breathtaking home designs that leave her clients more than satisfied. However, her life is missing something she desires more than anything - motherhood. Despite numerous attempts with fertility treatments and IVF, Olivia is unable to conceive. When things seem to be at their worst, the police inform Olivia and her husband Park of a shocking discovery - DNA evidence links Park's son to a murder case.

At first, Olivia is relieved, thinking this must be a mistake as she and Park do not have any children. But the reality is far more complicated when Park confesses that he donated sperm to a clinic years ago and has no idea how many children he has fathered. As the investigation into the murder case continues, more secrets come to the surface and the truth becomes unbearable. Olivia's husband may have fathered a killer, but she is also hiding her own dark secrets. Will these truths tear their marriage apart or will they find a way to come to terms with them?

I Have Some Questions for You by Rebecca Makkai

I Have Some Questions for You

Bodie Kane, a successful film professor and podcaster, wants to leave her past behind, including a family tragedy in her adolescence, her unhappy years at a New Hampshire boarding school, and the murder of her former roommate Thalia Keith. Although the circumstances surrounding Thalia's death and the conviction of the school's athletic trainer, Omar Evans, continue to be discussed online, Bodie prefers not to think about it. However, when she is invited back to Granby School to teach a course, she becomes increasingly drawn to the case and its apparent flaws. As she delves deeper, she wonders if she knew more about the murder than she realized and if the real killer is still out there. In "I Have Some Questions for You," author Rebecca Makkai has crafted a mystery that is both a gripping page-turner and a thought-provoking exploration of collective memory and one woman's reckoning with her past.
