

Superman Leaked Photos: David Corenswet's Full Costume and Arrest Scene - Fans Compare to Henry Cavill | 1

Superman Leaked Photos: The buzz around James Gunn's new Superman movie has reached a fever pitch with the recent leak of on-set photos. These intriguing images reveal David Corenswet, the new face of Superman, in a dramatic arrest scene by the military, sparking widespread discussion and comparison to Henry Cavill's portrayal of the iconic superhero.

David Corenswet as Superman: First Look

The leaked photos have given fans their first look at David Corenswet in the classic Superman costume. The costume remains faithful to the traditional design, featuring the iconic blue suit with a red cape and the unmistakable "S" emblem on the chest. In the photos, Superman is seen with his hands tied behind his back, escorted by military personnel to what appears to be the Metropolis City Hall. This arrest scene has generated significant interest and speculation among fans and critics alike.

Superman Leaked Photos: David Corenswet's Full Costume and Arrest Scene - Fans Compare to Henry Cavill | 2

Superman Leaked Photos: David Corenswet's Full Costume and Arrest Scene - Fans Compare to Henry Cavill | 3

Superman Leaked Photos: David Corenswet's Full Costume and Arrest Scene - Fans Compare to Henry Cavill | 4

Superman Leaked Photos: David Corenswet's Full Costume and Arrest Scene - Fans Compare to Henry Cavill | 5

Superman Leaked Photos: David Corenswet's Full Costume and Arrest Scene - Fans Compare to Henry Cavill | 6

The Mysterious Figure

Adding to the intrigue is the presence of a mysterious man in an all-black costume with a large "U" on his chest, trailing behind Superman. His face is obscured by a black mask, leading to rampant speculation about his identity. Some fans believe this could be Ultraman, Superman's evil doppelgänger from Earth-3, while others think he might be Ulysses aka Neil Quinn, a character who has worked against Superman in the comics. Despite the excitement, there has been no official confirmation about the storyline or the villain's identity in "Superman: Legacy."

Comparing to Henry Cavill's Superman

The arrest scene in the leaked photos has drawn comparisons to a similar moment in Zack Snyder's 2016 film, "Batman V Superman: Dawn of Justice." In Snyder's film, Henry Cavill's Superman is also seen being escorted by the military while handcuffed. This parallel has sparked debates among fans about the direction of the new movie and how Corenswet's portrayal will differ from Cavill's.

Henry Cavill's Superman was known for his brooding, intense demeanor and the darker tone of the films in which he appeared. In contrast, early impressions suggest that Corenswet's Superman might embody a more classic, hopeful interpretation of the character. This potential shift in tone has excited many fans who are eager to see a fresh take on Superman while still honoring the legacy left by Cavill.

First video of DAVID CORENSWET as SUPERMAN
pic.twitter.com/hUL8hUrB72

— DCU Updates (@DCU_Updates) June 24, 2024

First video of DAVID CORENSWET as SUPERMAN

Superman Leaked Photos: David Corenswet's Full Costume and Arrest Scene - Fans Compare to Henry Cavill | 7

Rachel Brosnahan on Set

Adding to the excitement, Rachel Brosnahan was also spotted on the set. Although she concealed her costume with an all-black outfit to keep it hidden from photographers, her presence has fueled speculation about her role and the dynamics she will bring to the movie.

Fans' Reactions

The fan reactions to the leaked photos have been overwhelmingly positive. Social media platforms are buzzing with discussions about the costume design, the potential storyline, and the new cast. Many fans are hopeful that James Gunn's vision for Superman will bring a fresh yet respectful take on the beloved superhero.

Also Read: Hit-Monkey Season 2 Gets New Action Packed Trailer