He made a deal with the demon Mephisto to save the life of his surrogate father, Crash Simpson, and as a result, he became bound to Zarathos, the spirit of vengeance. Ghost Rider has the power to control hellfire and can use his “Penance Stare” to inflict pain on those he considers evil. ## Ghost Rider Background

Ghost Rider is a supernatural being with powers derived from a deal he made with the demon Zarathos. He is known for his ability to generate and control hellfire, as well as his ability to transform into a flaming skeletal being with superhuman strength and durability. He has used these powers to fight against evil and protect the innocent, often facing off against demonic and supernatural threats.

Green lantern Background

In contrast, Green Lanterns are empowered by a power ring that allows them to create constructs and manipulate energy, using their willpower as the source of their power. These power rings are wielded by members of the Green Lantern Corps, a group of intergalactic peacekeepers chosen by the Guardians of the Universe to protect the universe from threats.

Pros

If Ghost Rider were to obtain powers similar to those of Green Lantern, he would likely gain access to a wide range of abilities that he could use to protect the world from danger. He could use his newfound powers to create energy constructs and manipulate energy in various ways, using his willpower to shape the energy into whatever forms he desires.

Cons

This could give Ghost Rider an even greater advantage in combat, allowing him to take on a wider range of threats and potentially even rivaling the power of some of the most powerful beings in the Marvel Universe. However, it's worth noting that Ghost Rider's abilities would still be fueled by his own inner turmoil and anger, which could potentially lead to him losing control of his powers if he becomes too emotional.

One potential scenario that could lead to Ghost Rider obtaining powers similar to those of Green Lantern would be if he were to be chosen by the Guardians of the Universe as a member of the Green Lantern Corps. The Guardians are a group of powerful extraterrestrial beings who are responsible for selecting individuals from different sectors of the universe to serve as Green Lanterns. They are drawn to individuals who demonstrate exceptional willpower and the ability to overcome great fear.

Combined Power

If Ghost Rider were to be chosen by the Guardians, it would be a significant turning point for the character. He would be given a power ring and trained in the use of his new abilities, learning how to harness his willpower and control the energy of his ring. This would be a major change for Ghost Rider, as he would no longer be limited to using his hellfire abilities and would instead have access to a wide range of energy-based abilities.

Ghost Rider Challenges and Responsibilities

However, it's worth noting that being a Green Lantern would also come with its own set of challenges and responsibilities. Ghost Rider would be expected to uphold the Green Lantern Corps' code of honor and protect the universe from threats, which could potentially put him at odds with his own sense of justice and morality. Additionally, Ghost Rider would have to contend with the various dangers and challenges that come with being a member of the Green Lantern Corps, such as facing off against powerful alien enemies and dealing with the politics of the intergalactic organization.

Overall, the hypothetical scenario of Ghost Rider obtaining powers similar to those of Green Lantern would be a major departure from the character's established abilities and lore, but it could potentially lead to some exciting new storyline and character development in the Marvel Comics universe. It would allow Ghost Rider to take on a wider range of threats and potentially even become a more central figure in the Marvel Universe, but it would also come with its own set of challenges and responsibilities that he would have to navigate.
